When she was a child Clara	reunited soldiers and their families.
Clara's brothers and sisters	treated injured pets.
She offered to teach without pay if	Clara worked as a clerk.
At the Patent Office	only served soldiers.
Clara insisted her wages at the Patent Office	the International Red Cross.
During the Civil War	the town would provide a place for her to teach.
In the war Clara was called	homeschooled her.
After the war was over she	she made bandages and treated wounded soldiers.
In Europe she learned about	the American Red Cross.
Clara Barton established	the Angel of the Battlefield.
At first the American Red Cross	helps during floods, earthquakes, and other disasters.
The Red Cross today	should be the same as a man was paid.
